Beyond The Gate

There is a gate beyond which each of us must eventually pass...

It leads to a place that we can call our home for eternity.

It is a place where we find happiness and rest, a place free from pain and sorrow. It is a place, which we are rejoined with our departed, loved ones...and a place where we are joined with our Heavenly Father.

Mama, it is wonderful to know that you are at peace and you are resting. No more sickness, no more pain, and no more suffering.

You are in a far better place. One day we will be rejoined together for all eternity in our Father's home above...

We Love You

“ Mom (my Angel)...I'm going to rewind the clocks back for a moment. 1970, it was just you and I solo. You were a very young lady trying to raise me, provide for me, and mold me into the respectful woman that I am today. Mom, I thank you and my love for you will continue to grow for you as our God hold my hand and guide me through the healing process of losing you here on earth.

2 years later you met your love/husband to be (43 years of devoted love) and from there gave birth to two more beautiful children.

Mom, I've always admired you for your strong will to over come all of life's obstacles that were thrown your way. From your battle with Tourettes to all the emotionally hurt feelings you held inside. But still you went on with life for many years to come.

I thank you for tirelessly working 2 and 3 jobs to ensure your family had clean clothes, nutritious meals and a warm place to sleep. You sacrificed and put your needs and wants last to ensure we didn't have to do without. Oh, I could go on and on. You have nothing but love and respect from me.

As I grew to be my own woman, I tried my best to change the tides and give you anything you asked me for. Your sacrifices for me as a young girl deserved anything you asked for in your later years.

For your family and friends you had a heart of gold. You would give your bill money to anyone who came to you in need. You went in your refrigerator and cabinets and gave food to anyone who came to you and was in need. You opened your doors of your home and shared it to those who needed a place to stay. Oh, I could go on and on. Again, you have nothing but love and respect from me.

With each birth date your health began to fade, you grew weaker, and through your a weakness and pain you still smiled, and you still freely gave what you had to others never in return asking them for anything but their love.

God has called you home my love, I could no longer be selfish wanting you to stay here on this earth in the condition you were in.

You tried your best to be strong and fight your ailing conditions.

Each day I sat at your hospital bedside I began to see the look in your eyes as though you were saying "Princess, I'm ready". When we changed your code status to DNR, I feel you said "Thank you". A week later on September 8, 2016 you closed your eyes and took your last breath. You have your wings now Angel...Fly high, fly high, fly high...I love you baby.

*Your princess,
Michelle*
