“ Mommy I was sitting here thinking about you. Wondering if I have done the right thing. I was giving the choice to disconnect your breathing machine and I could never get the what if I would have just waited. I keep telling myself if only I would have waited would the outcome would have been different. I will never know. And to me that had always been something that has made me question my decision. Even though I saw all the signs of you slipping away if I just would have waited. I decided from that moment on I don't want my children to be left with that decision to let go or to hang on. Only because I don't want them to live with what I had and still have to live with. If I could turn back the hands of time I would have done things differently. Yes people would say I am being selfish and I need to let go so that you can go in Peace. But I would have held on to the very end. I go over in my mind if I had one wish what would it be. It would be for you to come back and say to me baby you can relax in knowing it was my time and that there was nothing you could have done to keep me here. I want you to forget about the what if. And live in the now knowing I am at Peace and I love you. I would give anything to hear those words. I held your hand when you took your last breath and I felt a part of me leave that day. September 26,2015 and that part is still gone. I miss you so much. I Love you more than you would ever know.

“ During times of sorrow, I found that I gain strength by meditating on God's promises of a time when no resident will say they are sick
(Isa. 33:24) and the time when death will no longer be (Rev. 21:3,4).
I'm sure that you too, look forward to the fulfillment of those promises. Please accept my condolences for your loss and may the fond memories that you share provide you with a sense of comfort during your time of sorrow.
