

Cornelia A. Jones

January 29, 1925 - April 11, 2002

Cornelia Alice Breckenridge-Jones was born on January 29, 1925 to Joseph and Pearl Breckenridge in Baltimore, Maryland. She peacefully departed this life on April 11, 2002 while recovering from complications related to a series of strokes. During her seventy-six years of life, Cornelia spread an abundance of love to all who were fortunate to have been touched by her spirit. Cornelia was raised in Baltimore and attended St. Peter Claver Catholic Church and school. She later attended The Saint Frances Academy to complete high school. Cornelia married Marsh L. Jones and from that union came one son and two girls. She was a caring and loving mother, always placing her children's needs first. This nurturing attitude was not only bestowed onto her children, but to the students in the Baltimore City school district where she spent countless hours volunteering. Those of us who were blessed to have known Cornelia will cherish our memories. Cornelia was known especially for her talent and love for cooking. Music was another one of Cornelia's passions, and she enjoyed being a member of All Saints Choir. "Nana," as she was also called, loved children; in turn many of them adopted her as their surrogate grandmother. She lived by the model that life could always be worse. In fact, when asked how she is doing her response was always with a smile and a snap of her fingers, "I'm going along with the flow." Cornelia is survived by: her spouse, Marsh L. Jones; three children, Candy T. Murphy (Deceased), Tony A. Jones and Michelle C. Abrams; two grandchildren, Maurice Warren Hart and Rachelle C. Abrams; son -in-law, Raymond Abrams; and many devoted friends.

“ *Mrs. Jones was one of my "other mothers". I don't think I ever saw her without a smiling face. She could make everybody feel just a little more special. I remember her fruit punch with orange slices, the Halloween cake, and her Christmas tree that stayed up until February. We'll miss you, "Nana"! Love, Julie##imported-begin##Julie A.
