“ Nobody could light up a family gathering like Uncle Curtis. The minute any music started playing, you'd see that familiar spark in his eyes and that smile that meant the dance floor was about to come alive. Didn't matter if it was a wedding, birthday, cookout, or just a regular Sunday get-together - if there was music, Uncle Curtis was dancing!

I can still see him out there, moving with such joy, not caring who was watching. He had this way of making everyone want to join in. One minute he'd be doing his signature moves, and the next thing you knew, he had aunts, cousins, and even the kids who were usually too shy, all out there dancing with him. His energy was just that contagious!

Those memories of him dancing at family events are pure gold - the kind that make you smile every time you think about them. He taught us that sometimes the best way to show your love for life and family is to just get up and dance, no matter who's watching.

Those were the moments that made our family gatherings unforgettable. Now whenever I hear certain songs, I can't help but think of Uncle Curtis out there on the dance floor, showing us all how to live life with joy and not take ourselves too seriously."

This kind of memory beautifully captures the spirit of those special family members who bring extra life and joy to family gatherings. Their legacy lives on in the smiles and stories they leave behind, and in the way they taught us to embrace life's happy moments. Uncle Curtis will be missed! family you have our deepest sympathy
