“ It's been a long time, but I miss this guy. We met through mutual hobbies of DnD and Magic the gathering and we quickly became good friends. He was always ready with advice and an ear to listen. He had the patience of a Saint. This man could sit through anything and never be annoyed or bothered. He truly was an awesome man. He taught me so much and we went through a lot together. He always found the silver lining to every cloud. We would go on weekend trips to play magic at tournaments, man he was bad at the game, and he knew it, but that didn't stop him from having the most fun there. He can in dead last one time and I remember pointing out to him that he looked like he was having a better time than the people competing for 1st place. He was an inspiration and a great friend.

He was my 1st true introduction to the game of DnD, he was welcoming and had so much patience with this kid who knew absolutely 0 about the game. He explained it to me and helped me and gave me the love I have now for the game. A love that I shared with others and try to share even just a fraction of the kindness that he shared with me. He inspired me and I share that inspiration through the shared game of DnD. He remains a character in all my games till this day. His ability to tell a story and make the game come to life were second to none, and my style of running the game is shaped by Darrin. He was a big part of my life and I continue to remember him. He is missed. Darrin I have take your mantle of forever DM, and will carry it forward. I miss you man.
