Wilkins, Sr., her son Marvin C. Johnson, Sr.; her father William Eaton, Jr.; her brother Harold Eaton, and her half-sister Julia-May Eaton-Fox.

She is survived by her children, her loving daughter Brenda D. Johnson, her son James T. Wilkins, Jr. (Kelly), and her devoted mother Hattie Eaton. Two brothers; William Eaton, III (Mary) and Ronald Eaton. Six grandchildren; Lamont A. Johnson, Marvin C. Johnson, Jr., Jasmine Wilkins, Jaquetta Johnson, Deja Johnson and Ja'mesha Wilkins. One great-grandchild; Jakief D. Johnson. One daughter-in-law; Cleo Johnson. One aunt; Henrietta Sumbler. One step-son; James Green. Two devoted cousins; Joyce Brown and Diane Ross. Lastly, a host of other nieces, nephews and friends with two of her friends being noteworthy; Barbara Allen and Jerry Walker.

Delores, was baptized at an early age, attended Richmond Public Schools and worked for National Linen & Iniform Service, retiring after 30 years of devoted service. Never one to be idle, she rejoined the work force, dedicating another 10 plus years to M&B Headwear.

Those that knew her best could not deny that the phrase "Work hard, play harder" was coined and executed, flawlessly by her. She had the ability to juggle family, work and leisure with neither getting shorted. She had a kind heart and a razor sharp tongue, when she was done, you were often left numb. She's danced to R&B funk and disco; played pitty-pat and loved the Virginia lotto, all while....bending that elbow.
