

Dwain Keith Johnson

June 7, 1955 - February 13, 2019

Dwain Keith Johnson, beloved son of Henry Johnson and Louise Brown, was born in Baltimore, Maryland. Angels came to bring him his wings on February 13, 2019 after 63 years.

“Peanut,” as he was affectionately called, received his education in the Baltimore Public School System. He was determined to receive his Diploma and proudly accomplished this in 2013. Peanut was employed at various restaurants throughout Baltimore City as he loved to cook. He was also employed with the Bea Gaddy Foundation for several years.

Everyone would look forward to seeing him at all family gatherings and celebrations because he would surely light up the party, always with his famous potato salad in hand. He made the best potato salad.

A Jack-of-all trades, you could always call on Peanut to help you out with any special projects or odd jobs. Whether it was helping you paint a house or do some minor repairs, you could count on him to be there.

He loved to play cards and hang out with his siblings or buddies. He was a free spirit and lived by his own rules. He was very outspoken and never afraid to let you know what he thought. He would gladly voice his opinion whether you asked or not. He loved a great debate, and was sure to make his point known.

He was loved by all who knew him. His nieces and nephews always loved when he affectionately referred to them as “Boop-Boop”.

Dwain was all about his home town sports teams! He was a fan of the Baltimore Orioles but “LOVED” the Baltimore Ravens.

Dwain was preceded in death by his mother and father, Henry Johnson and Louise Brown; stepfather, Charles Brown; brother, William Scott; sister, Valerie Wilkes and brother-in-law, George Wilkes.

He leaves to cherish his memory: three sisters, Bonita Johnson, Yvette Webb and Cassandra Johnson-Grant; sister-in-law, Selma Scott; brother, Andre Johnson and brother-in-law, Jesse Grant III; his nieces and nephews, Earl (Kim), Karen, Kizzy (Robert), Brandy, Ebony, Juan (Micole), Jesse (Jeremy), Stephani, Robert Jr., Jamar, Crystal, and Jessica; and a host of other beloved family and friends.
