Rest In Peace. Heaven is now your home each and every day and you can see Jesus face to face. You are now free to dance the night away. Just remember to save a hand dance for me.

“ January 28, 1977, when all of the nations nation's African Americans were glued to their TV sets watching the last episode of Alex Haley's "Roots", I decided to go into labor with my late son, Kareem (8/9/01). I couldn't find nobody available to get me to the hospital. Richard came to my rescue, fussing all the way to the hospital (and waited) saying "if it's a boy, he's going to act out every scene/part of Khunta Kinte, I miss". Of course it had me in laughing labor as he always had a way to make you laugh. And I will always remember the laughter. Well my brother, life got busy and I'm not sure if you ever got to see it all, but check in with (Khunta/Kareem), tell him we all said hello and call curtains as you close this chapter on the story of "The Life and Legacy of Dwight Ricardo (Richard) Gleaton". Rest In Paradise.
