“ I remember my grandpop picking me up from work often and being more like a father to me than my grandfather. He was the finest of men. He took me to get my first car from an auction in Pennsylvania. My grandfather was a class act and I miss him dearly.

Love you Grand dad and tell Granny that I love and miss her as well.

Your granddaughter,

Turtle

“ I remember, I was about nineteen years old. I was staying with Poppop between the spring and fall semesters. So, one morning I woke up and was heading downstairs. The house alarm immediately went off. Naturally, I ran back up stairs and locked myself in my room and called him on his mobile phone. He came home right away. I was already on the house phone with the security company. I was explaining that I was not sure if anyone was in the house or not and I gave them the pass code. Poppop took over the phone after, he found me locked in my room. The alarm was turned off. Poppop started chucking at me and then apologized for leaving the motion sensor on when he left out early that morning. He forgot that I was there. And he chuckled because he knew exactly what happened but I had locked myself away thinking "someone" was coming "to get me". We got a good laugh from that incident for awhile. I always loved my Poppop's sense of humor. He was one of the most humble men I know. I love you Poppop Luke. Rest easy in paradise and save a sunny spot on the beach for me.
