“ Henry and I met on a random bench in Baltimore City in 2018. If I hadn't decided to walk that way that day or if he hadn't been so willing to help me with the story I was working on for a class at the University of Maryland, I would have lost out on four years of a great friendship. I truly believe that God puts people in our lives for a reason and I know that it was no mistake that He put Henry in mine.

One of my favorite things about Henry was that despite how hard life was, he stayed faithful and optimistic. “I wake up in the morning, I'm happy I woke up...God woke me up. It's another day, it's a new challenge,” Henry told me.

What an outlook on life.

Henry said, “the word that always stayed with me was the word ‘faith.’ Without faith, you ain't got nothing. With faith, all things is possible.”

I'll hold on to those small moments forever and I hope that we can all look at life a little more like Henry today.

Henry will be incredibly missed and my deepest condolences are with all of his family and friends.

I hope there's a chocolate bar waiting in heaven with your name on it, friend.
