He received his education in the Baltimore City Public School System, obtaining his high School Diploma through the Practitioners Leadership Institute at the Center for Urban Families, in Baltimore City.

Jonez had a heart of gold and made anyone anything he encountered feel an abundance of love. There was no friend nor stray dog he wouldn't open his doors, arms or heart to. He was the life of every party entertained us all with his humor from doing cartwheels through the kitchen in bodysuits and goggles, to mocking his auntie by walking around in one of her many wigs.

He was a lover of the community, for which he was a coach for the Family was his top priority, whether it be blood or not. From backyard barbecues to neighborhood cookouts on the front, Joe was there and ready to spread love. He especially shared that love with his son on field trips, family vacations and bike riding lessons, Jonez will truly missed.

He was preceded in death by his grandmothers, Rebecca Alston and Mattie Williams and grandfather, Major Alston.
