“ Its almost a year since I lost my best friend..my brother Kevin. Anyone that knew Kevin was always happy to encounter him..because they understood they their day was about to be made. Despite his condition of being unable to walk since the age 2, Kevin was always upbeat, happy, very funny all the time. He was loved honestly by everyone that got to know him, to the point where he was more like an institution. Even to this day folks including myself expected Kevin to be around forever, other than the way he`s in our hearts. Kevin was a great lover of music and my biggest inspiration, as his younger brother I had the honor of being a student of his some what about music and life Im sure unlike any other relationship between brothers. I recall staying up late on Friday nights with Kevin while he played records and taught me about the different jobs of the names on the album credits. His knowledge of music was extensive and ran as deep as his love for his family and friends whom he played music and sang for. He loved to sing and make music with his mouth long before beat boxxin or even before hip-hop. When we would go outside when we were younger, the first thing our friends would ask Kevin to do was sing a song. Kevin loved the ladies as well, and they loved him a lot because he was`nt the guy sitting around depressed about his situation..He was the life of any party, he would dance his special dance and enjoy himself everyplace he went. Kevin made friends everywhere he went, his spirit was unlike any other I`ve known and he lives in me. When I think about my brother Kevin, all I can do is smile and thank GOD for allowing me the honor of knowing Kevin Hinton..Let alone be blessed to be his little brother. He went through a whole lot in his childhood, spent a great time away from us due to hospitalization, and had the best stories when he came home. I appreciate that he never let anything or anyone stop him from doing what he wanted no matter what it was. I Miss My Friend..Although He Walks With Me Where Ever I Go.
