LaKeisha's educational journey began at Northwood Elementary School and continued through Chinquapin Middle School, culminating in her graduation from Baltimore City College. Her intelligence and ambition were evident early on, as she aspired to become a doctor, committed to a career in the medical field. She earned a phlebotomy certificate, taking a meaningful step toward her goal.

In addition to her passion for medicine, LaKeisha also had a deep love for cooking. She pursued this interest by enrolling in Baltimore International College, where she earned a specialized degree in Culinary Arts. Above all, LaKeisha cherished her role as a grandmother. Her love for her grandchildren was boundless - gentle and filled with pride. She celebrated their every achievement, comforted them in times of need, and filled their lives with love, laughter and care. Her unwavering support will live on in the hearts of her grandchildren, whom she loved more than words can express.

Another pivotal part of LaKeisha's beautiful journey was the love she shared with James Coppage. Their story began in 2017 and from that moment on, they were truly inseparable. Together they created a life filled with laughter, adventure, and unwavering support - often traveling, cherishing each other's company and building memories that would last a lifetime.
