“ I LOVE YOU BABY! LaReil Jaemaz Robinson you will be missed with every breath I take and every step I make. Even if I can not understand why GOD took you so early. I do understand that you are in Heaven. And without you here LaReil it feels like hell on earth!! But I know I will see your face one day, so I will keep fighting because that's one day I can't wait for!!!

As the days go on I realize I'm in this dark whole and I can't find my way out , so if anybody happens to come by my baby's Tribute Wall and reads this please leave me something to remember. Some words that may help, because everyday I'm fighting a battle that can not be won by myself. And even though June 07 2010 at 7:52 a.m. was the absolute saddest day of my life, I know I'll see him again!!! You know some people think the loss of a baby may not feel or hurt, as a loss of a older child, but I would give my arms to see him turn 15, I would give my legs to see him learn to walk, my eyes to hold him, my life so he could be here another day!! I will never know his favorite color, food, or t.v.show ect...

But what I do know about my precious baby boy is you could not do just anything to make him laugh. I could make him laugh by kissing him a certain way, and taking my finger and putting it on the bottom of his foot, but I believe there was a angle that would make him laugh all the time, even in his sleep. I would be trying to figure out everything that makes him laugh and he would turn his head all around and begin laughing at something else (angles). It was so funny to watch people try to make my baby laugh and he would just sit there. And that boy would gain a half a pound a day, he ate every two hours. (hour and 54 minutes is when he would eat most of the time) LaReil was so peacefull to be around he never cried unless he wanted something. I know that's one peace I will always miss in my heart, arms.

*LOVE ALWAYS,
Your Mother, Valerie Bryant*
