

Manrise Moore

January 29, 1953 - August 16, 2018

MANRISE MOORE daughter of the late John and Mable Dixon, was born January 29, 1953 in Baltimore, Maryland. She was called home to the Lord on August 16, 2018 in Houston, Texas.

Manrise, who went by the nickname Mur, was one of twelve siblings. Growing up, she and her siblings were very close so when they began to have children, they raised them together.

Education was important to Manrise and she not only emphasized that to her children, nieces, and nephews, but their friends as well. She received her preliminary education at Eastern High School in Baltimore, MD and went on to obtain a Bachelor and Arts degree from University of Baltimore in 2000 and a Master of Arts degree in Education and Human Development in 2012 from George Washington University in Washington D.C., all while putting her children through private school and college. Manrise was also enrolled in a Ph.D. Program at Towson University. She was a very educated woman.

Manrise loved to help those in need as she dedicated 30 years of service to the State of Maryland both as a social worker and an advocate for the blind. She enjoyed spending time with family and friends by cooking large meals and watching and cheering for her favorite football team, the Ravens. Her children were the most important things to her and she supported them in everything they did.

Preceding Manrise in Heaven are her parents John and Mable, sisters Marguerite and Betty, and brother Robin.

She leaves to mourn: her son and daughter, Derrick and Marrisia; six sisters, two brothers, nieces, nephews, and host of other relatives and friends.

Manrise was a terrific mother and woman and will truly be missed, but never forgotten.
