

Mary F. McMeans

August 13, 1938 - September 10, 2017

Mary Frances McMeans was born to Frances Frazier and Pratt Wallace on August 13, 1938 in Baltimore, Maryland. She was educated in the Baltimore City public school system at Douglas High School and went on to work as a candy striper at Luthern Hospital.

Mary grew up on Bradley Street where she became close friends with the Smith family who lived across the alley on George Street. The family friendship carried a bond that continues to this day with her grandchildren. Mary grew into an independent and smart woman. She worked as an office manager for a successful candy distribution company for over 20 years, making a comfortable life for her and her two girls, Renee and Romona. She ended up working for Blue Cross and Blue Shield where she retired making her available to be showered with love from family and friends.

Mary, lovingly called “Mum” by all of her grandchildren, great grandchildren and their friends, was the center of the family, living as the Matriarch, keeping the family close to her and close to God.

When you think of Mary, you think of her bubbly outgoing personality, her joy of living and her love for the Lord.

As Mary goes home to God, her daughter, the late Renee Hurtt , her brothers Pratt Wallace, Ray Wallace, and Richard Wallace will be waiting with open arms. Left to celebrate her homecoming and rejoice in her memory, Mary leaves a loving daughter, Romona Hill; her baby brother Robert "Tank" Broaddus; her grandchildren, David Collins, Daniera Gibson, Derrick Madden, Ciera Gibson, Simone Madden, Marissa Lewis and Ashlyn Lewis. Also to cherish her memory are her great grandchildren; Jaylen Madden, Demi Madden, Dalia Collins, Mason Carroll, Malia Collins, Kyrie Norris, and Carter Lewis. Barbarba "Breezy" Brown, Alexine "Muffie" Young, and also a host of other relatives and close friends.
