

NANCEANE JONES

October 3, 1964 - July 9, 2020

Nanceane McCoy Jones, affectionately known as “Ms. “ Nikki”, Nana Banana, Auntie and many monikers depending on who you spoke to slipped into peaceful reward on Thursday, July 9, after a lengthy illness and many health challenges. She was born on October 3, 1954 in Baltimore, Maryland, the second child of six to the late Elizabeth Ann Tate and Marcel McCoy. She was preceded in death by three of her siblings, Gilbert McCoy, Linda Smith, and Marcel McCoy.

She attended school on Baltimore City before achieving higher education from a community college. Nanceane used her many skills and talents in several different jobs before settling into her career as a full-time case manager at the Maryland Department of Social Services where she was employed for over twenty years before retiring. Nanceane married Ulysses Jones, Jr. This union blended family of five daughters, Tavoria Rogers, Rhonda Arnold, Lygia and Shella Brady and Shannon Jones into one family. Nanceane made numerous friend wherever she went, including strangers and always left a lasting impression on everyone with her loving heart , gentle spirit, warm smile, and her laughter. She became known as the best mediator anyone could ever have. She could take a bad situation and turn it around, so everyone involved felt like they had just won the lottery. She also had a discerning spirit in reading between the lines of a needed task (whatever it was) and have that challenge resolved by making whatever was needed---happen!

Always considerate in putting others needs before her own. She was a devoted family woman and will sincerely be missed by everyone who knew her and her grateful personality. Among her many talents, Nanceane loved karaoke, dancing and traveling. Although she had only been out of the country once, she traveled to several other states and already had a bucket list of where she would go to next. She also loved to shop (especially for clothes) and could always find a bargain. She was always known as being an impeccable dresser. This also led to her love of entertaining always knowing the exact outfit to wear for the occasion. She had a sense of “BOUGEE” - not in an affluent way but just the right amount of bounce to say, “I paid my dues and now I can show it off just a little!” Her manicure and pedicure were also her passion, she kept them done and in style along with her “SIGNATURE RED LIPSTICK”.

Nanceane studied as a Jehovah Witness and wanted to pass those qualities and attributes on to her grandchildren. Once her grandsons were born she looked towards retirement and taking on the watchful eye of helping to raise them, as well as spoil them and nurture them in the same loving manner as she had her daughters. Once “happy retired” she was able to stay at home with boys and growing family of grands. Loving and fond memories will be cherished by a wonderful and devoted: Ulysses Jones, Jr., five daughters; Tavonia Rogers, Rhonda Arnold, Lygia and Shella Brady and Shannon Jones two siblings; Diane McCoy, Charles Tate Jr., twin grandsons; Avion and Savion Soremekun, one granddaughter; Jylia Battle, and a host of relatives and friends.

“ I would like to say that Nicki is a wonderful and caring person. There were times I was in my backyard just doing whatever. I would here a voice from the sky. I would look around not seeing anyone, then here Hey Jeff. It's Nicki, calling out her kitchen window. She will be missed. Shirley and Jeff
