

Nathaniel Easy

February 21, 1931 - August 16, 2003

Nathaniel Easy, son of the late Odessa and Sylvester Valentine, was born on February 21, 1931 in Baltimore, Maryland. He departed this life on August 16, 2003 after a lengthy illness. Nathaniel received his formal education in the Baltimore City Public Schools. Upon completion of his education, he joined the United States Merchant Marines and became a Merchant Seaman, traveling the Four Corners of the world. After retiring from the Merchant Marines, Nathaniel was employed by the Maryland State for many, many years as a licensed engineer. Later he met and married the former Ernestine Gomez. In the quest to always improve himself Nathaniel became a very spiritual man who enjoyed many faiths and religions. Nathaniel loved to listen to all types of music (especially jazz and “oldies”). He especially loved Caribbean music and dances. Which is one of the reasons his friends would call him “The King of the Caribbean”). He loved meeting people of all nationalities, and if he considered you one of his close friends he would always give you a “nickname”. Just to show you how much he cared about you. He was the kind of man who took great pride in his neighborhood and the people living in it. At anytime one could see him talking to the younger people encouraging them to stay in school and take pride in themselves, and how they dressed, just as he did. Nathaniel was a man who loved to be “well dressed” for all occasions, which was one of his known characteristics. Nathaniel will truly be missed by everyone who knew him. It can be said that he was a friend and a devoted family man. He leaves to mourn: his devoted wife, Ernestine Easy; one sister, Evelyn Bushrod; his beloved grandson, Tyrone "Brewster" Cox; two granddaughters, Jennell and Dora Gross; a god-son, Darrell Addison, all of Baltimore, Maryland.
