“ *Glen I am so very sorry for the loss of your son. I am sure your heart is broken. We are not wise enough to know God's plan even as we view his works. But surely God's plan is at work here and someday it will be crystal clear to us. For now we can only comfort each other and have faith that our father knows of our pain, and is grieving for his child as well as for his child's son. “ Healing happens slowly over weeks and months and years and even then, there will be days when memories call fresh tears. A song, a scent, or photograph keeps your heart in touch; with all that you so treasured in the one you miss so much.##imported-begin##The March Family and Staff##imported-end##
