Sandy spent her early years in the East Baltimore Area known for being loving but fierce. Later on in life she would move to the Northwest Baltimore area. Where she would later reconnect with her childhood sweetheart Anthony Hall, love of her life whom she married on June 8, 1996 and she built a life filled with love and communion. After suffering from the tragic passing of her beloved husband. She continued to love and nurture her sons and work as a nursing technician for Johns Hopkins Hospitals for 5 years. She then returned to East Baltimore, embracing her roots and reconnecting with family and friends in the neighborhood that shaped her.

Sandy was a dedicated nurse technician for over 17 years, a profession that reflected her deep compassion and commitment to caring for others. She was a passionate advocate for addiction recovery, drawing from her own experiences to inspire and support those on their journey to healing.
