

Walter Robinson

August 13, 1962 - January 22, 2024

WALTER ELIJAH ROBINSON, son of Laura Amanda Robinson-Harris and Walter Henry Harris, was born on Monday, August 13, 1962, in Baltimore, Maryland.

Walter was the ninth child of eleven. He was raised in West Baltimore and attended Joseph H. Lockerman-Bundy Elementary School. As a child and growing into a preteen, Elijah loved helping his father at his convenience store, but more importantly, playing with his friends and cousins in the neighborhood. When the family moved to East Baltimore, he attended and graduated from Lombard Middle School and Lake Clifton High School.

As a young man, he was mentored by his brother-in-law, Julius and sharpened his skills as an electrician and naming his craft “E Electrician.” While performing his skills as an electrician, and he loved being an electrician, he would always sing, hum, or have that perfect whistle like his dad while working. He would talk about his work and the completion of his jobs with pride in his voice. He grew up in a faith based home acknowledging Jesus as Lord and Savior; and during family prayer night, he would sing joyfully “There Is A God Somewhere”.

Elijah leaves to cherish his memory: his companion, Patricia Henry; two children, Angelica and Darryl; godchild, Khalil who was often in the home and they developed a strong bond; siblings, Janet McGavock (William), Ervin Robinson (Janice), Douglas Robinson (Sheila), Laurie Jackson (Julius), Julia Harrison, Blanche' Robinson-Bailey, Edgar Robinson (Ruth), Victoria Robinson, Elaine Leggette, Rona Harris, Judy Lawrencee and Richard Harris; a host of nieces, nephews, great-nieces and -nephews, cousins and friends. Preceding him in death are his sisters Amanda Robinson, Anna Jordan and Sandra Lee, his father Walter Henry Harris, and his mother Laura Amanda Robinson-Harris.
